MEMORANDUM FOR DISCUSSION WITH DCI

1. Large number of captured documents relating to German activities with respect to methods of psychological handling of prisoners and slave labor are known to be in the archives of the War Crimes Commission, Nurnburg. In addition, there is evidence that information may have found its way there dealing with certain aspects of experiments with biologic and chemical warfare as well as radiation.

2. A team from CIA reviewed a large number of repositories of captured documents but was unable to make a survey of the material at Nurnburg because of the dispersion of the acquisitions in numerous repositories, the absence of a central locator system and the incomplete cataloging in the individual repositories.

It is believed that much intelligence information of great value to CIA both from the substantive and other points of view exists in these files and it is requested that consideration be given to the initiation of arrangements for reconnaissance survey of the repositories with later intent of acquisition of selected materials not now required by the War Crimes Commission.
